

This book introduces a wide range of emotions which are presented in spectacular drawings and clear language. Your child encounters situations in which he may experience different emotions – happiness, fear, excitement, insult, enthusiasm, sadness. From a toddlers point of view, every event is significant and may arise intense feelings. Feelings result in behavioral responses which eventually become part of the childs repertoire acquired during his first years.

The question is then – how do we react to our childs feelings and reactions? It seems that as adults we tend to relate to the childs reactions rather than to his feelings. Woody Moody is a toddler who encounters both indoors and outdoors situations, in some of which he interacts with people while in others he goes through different experiences. In all cases, emotions arise in him and thus create behavioral responses. This book contains short descriptions of situations and responses and is written by an expert psychologist. It presents real life situations which may serve as a springboard for both parents and their toddler to discuss feelings while giving legitimacy to any emotion that comes up. This book is the first in a series of Woody Moody Books where the child meets his inner world and the interactions he has with the people in his surroundings.
